DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

1. Claims 10, 11 and 17 have been amended and claim 22 has been cancelled as requested in the amendment of Paper No. 16, filed on May 30, 2002. Claims 10-12 and 17 are pending in the instant application.
2. The Text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action
3. Any objection or rejection of record, which is not expressly repeated in this action has been overcome by Applicant's response and withdrawn.
4. Applicant's arguments filed on May 30, 2002 have been fully considered but they are not deemed to be persuasive for the reasons set forth below.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

5. Claims 10-12, 17 stand rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is drawn to an invention with no apparent or disclosed specific and substantial credible utility for the reasons of record in section 11 of Paper No.16. Briefly, the instant application has provided a description of an isolated DNA encoding a protein and the protein encoded thereby. The instant application does not disclose the biological role of this protein or its significance.

Applicant submits that the utility of the claimed ZGGBP1 is based on sequence similarity to known proteins, specifically "SEQ ID NO:2 has high homology to the human and mouse forms of NEDD-4" (page 14, third paragraph of the Response). Applicant refers to the tables presented in Exhibits 1-3 to show the level of degree of sequence similarity. Applicant further refers to the Revised Interim Utility Guidelines Training Materials, which states that "if there is a well-established utility already associated with the claimed invention, the utility need not be asserted in the specification as filed" (page 15, third paragraph of the Response). This has not been found to be persuasive for the following reasons.

According to the instant specification, ZGGBP1 gene "shows appreciable sequence homology to the ned-4 gene [which] is a human homologue of the mouse nedd-4 gene which is known to be differentially expressed during neural development and to be involved in signal transduction" (page 1, lines 28-32 of the instant specification). Analysis of the data provided in Exhibit 1 of the Response confirms that ZGGBP1 has 63% sequence identity to human NED4 and 77% sequence identity to mouse NED4. However, based on the analysis of the structural similarities one skilled in the art can, at best, only conclude that the instant ZGGBP1 and NED4 proteins belong to the same family, and it is well known in the art that members of the same protein family can have substantially diverse functions. Numerous publications exist on the topic that amino acid structure cannot necessarily predict the function of the protein: "Knowing the protein structure by itself is insufficient to annotate a number of functional classes and is also insufficient for annotating the specific details of protein function" (see Skolnick et al., Box 2 on page 36). Moreover, "Structural similarity does not necessarily mean a common evolutionary origin and homologous sequences may evolve into different folds (according to current classification schemes) (See Bork et al., Current Opinion in structural Biology, 1998, 8, page 332, first column, second paragraph).

Therefore, in the absence of knowledge of the biological significance of these specific ZGGBP1 polypeptides of SEQ ID NO:2 and 4 there is no immediately obvious patentable use for the claimed proteins. There is no evidence of record, which associates the instant polypeptides with any disease or disorder, or with any specific and credible biological activity. Applicant submits that "members of the NEDD4 family [...] have ubiquitin protein ligase activity", or "[are able] to interact with epithelial sodium channel", or "can bind to phosphoserine and phosphothreonine residues", or "may be able to interact with a larger repertoire of protein substrates than first thought" (page 15, second paragraph of the Response). There is little doubt that the members of NEDD4 family have biological significance and carry numerous physiological functions. However, the data based on functional studies of different domains of different members of NEDD4 family does not support specific substantial and credible utility of the NEDD4 family. Therefore, sequence similarity to the family of proteins that exhibit many different biological activities does not provide evidence for identification of a substantial credible and specific utility of the instant claimed sequences. There is no evidence of record that would disclose that polypeptides of SEQ ID NO:2 or 4 have any of the activities of NEDD4 family. One skilled in the art would not expect that administration of the claimed polypeptides would have any effect on an individual because there is no evidence provided in the instant specification to suggest otherwise.

Thus, since the instant specification does not disclose a credible "real world" use for the encoded protein then the claimed invention is incomplete and, therefore, does not meet the requirements of 35 U.S.C. § 101 as being useful.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

6. Claims 10-12, 17 are also rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph for the reasons of record in section 12 of Paper No.16.

Conclusion

7. No claim is allowed.

8. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
